FRANK EVERETT SOLICITS PARDON
ON GROUND THAT HE IS CURED

Frank C. Everett, now of Placerville, Cal., who is on parole from the Nevada penitentiary, where he was sent for life after killing a man at Mina, has asked for a pardon, says the Gazette.

On parole since 1910, he is said to have entirely recovered from a peculiar form of insanity under which he shot a perfect stranger without provocation. The removal of a needle imbedded in the skull, by cutting out a section of the bone, is credited for Everett's recovery. His application is before the board of pardons, meeting at Carson.

Everett is now declared to be perfectly normal, and it is understood that the family of Malone, the railroad mechanic he killed at Mina five years ago, will not again oppose his efforts to secure complete freedom.

Judge B. F. Currier, Jr., who took Everett's case on appeal, was the first to discover that Everett was a sufferer from the malady known as Jacksonian epilepsy, a type of the dread disease that can be cured.

Through the efforts of Judge Currier and on recommendation of Stoddard, Everett was, in the summer of 1910, removed from prison and brought to Reno for an operation.

A needle on which Everett fell when 9 years old, was found to be imbedded in a deep groove in his skull. Two operations were required.
During the second a piece of the skull the size of a dollar was removed and found to be half an inch in thickness, with the brain adhered to it. Then it was discovered that to put the bone back in place would only mean a probable recurrence of the difficulty in the future. So the scalp was sewn over.

Since that time, it is stated, Everett has been perfectly normal, in spite of the hole in his skull, which has never been filled.
Everett was formerly manager of the Sierra Gordo mine near Bishop.
He was subject to fits of epilepsy and his wife always traveled with him. Before and after each attack he would be insane for certain periods.
Once, being allowed to go alone to Reno, he had an attack. At Mina he took charge of the engine and gave orders to the trainmen. He then walked to the roundhouse and ordered an engine backed out, when was done, the man on it recognizing that he was not normal. Everett then spoke to the foreman of the roundhouse and was threatened with a monkey wrench. He walked around an engine, saw Malone, and almost without warning, shot him through the forehead. It was his privilege to carry a gun on account of the payroll in his charge.

In prison, it is said, Everett had as many as two serious attacks a week and was placed in padded cells to prevent being injured. His true plight was discovered through the formation of an abscess on his head.

It is said that Everett divided his interest in the mine with the widow of the man he unwittingly killed.

RAWHIDE COMING
BACK IN FORCE

TWO MINES ARE TURNING OUT ABOUT $44,000 EVERY MONTH.

C. W. Kinney made a trip to Rawhide this week and yesterday returned with Mr. Phelps. Mr. Kinney was surprised at the progress that is being made in the former boom camp, and brings news of the splendid output of the mines.

There are now about 450 people in the camp. The Queen mill is running steadily on ore from the Nevada New Mines company's property, two shifts being regularly employed in the mine, making about 100 men.
The cyanide is used and the melting every two weeks cleans up about $11,000. E. W. King is manager of both mine and mill and Capt. Jack Davis is superintendent of the mill.

The National mill is running steadily on ore from the Black Eagle and is employing the same number of men as the above property, the results from the cleanup every two weeks amounting to practically the same. This means an output from these two properties alone of at least $44,000 a month. Therefore, it will be seen that Rawhide is an important producer among the camps of Nevada.

The Queen mill is saving from 92 to 95 per cent of the precious metal.
Mr. Kinney was taken to the 600 level of the Nevada New Mines company by Mr. King, where three modern drills were pounding away. The ledge at this level was about three feet wide and some of the streaks run as high as $800 per ton. There is pay ore on every level. Mr. Kinney says that besides being a first-class mining man, Mr. King is equally as good as a host when he takes off his digging clothes and lies himself to be bungalow on the hill.—Fallen Eagle.

WIFE WITNESS AS
HUSBAND WAS STABBED

OSSINING, N. Y., April 16.—It is being anxiously watching the outcome of a fight in which he was one of the participants, Giovanni Cilino, cook at the Europa hotel, on Lake street, was stabbed in the abdomen last night and received wounds that terminated fatally. D. Petri, after plunging the steel blade into the body of his antagonist, calmly withdrew the weapon, placed it on the cooking table and then walked from the place.

SIX MILLION IN
GOLD IS PRIZE
OF GRUB STAKE

MRS. ELLA HEIM BRINGS ACTION THAT RECALLS ALASKA
HISTORY.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.— Events that had their beginning many years ago in a San Francisco orphan asylum and a glittering climax in the discovery of the great gold mines in Alaska, culminated in a suit now up for trial before Superior Judge Trout that involves the ownership of the richest group of mines in Alaska and the possession of millions of dollars that have been taken from the frozen tundra.

The plaintiff is Mrs. Ella Heim of San Lorenzo, a white-haired woman of charming presence. One of the star witnesses is her pretty 16-year-old daughter. The defendants are Jerry L. Wilson and his wife, Alice, both pioneers of the frozen north Wilson being one of the six men who discovered gold at Nome and located among other claims the fabulously rich Ophir group.

Seek to Establish Trust.
Joined with the Wilsons as defendants are J. S. Kimball and the Wilson-Kimball Mining company. The suit is to establish a trust in mining properties alleged to have been discovered under the grub stake contract and for an accounting as to the value of the property.

The amount involved is said to be more than $6,000,000.
Back in the 70s two little girls, left parentless, were placed in a San Francisco orphanage. Their name was Nightingale. Mrs. Heim took one of the girls and raised her as her own. Later the other girl, Alice Nightingale, went to Petaluma. When she was about 16 she returned to San Francisco and went to work in a corset factory. Her sister heard of this, told Mrs. Heim about it, and the tender-hearted woman took the sister into her home and treated her as a daughter.

In 1887 Alice Nightingale was married at the Heim residence to Jerry Wilson, the wedding being one of the social events of the season.

Soon after this, according to Attorney Barrett, Mrs. Heim grubstaked Wilson, who went to Alaska. Two years later Mrs. Heim also grubstaked Mrs. Wilson on the same terms and Mrs. Wilson joined her husband at Nome.

According to the complaint the Wilsons concealed their luck from Mrs.
Heim, telling her that they were very poor. Mrs. Heim meantime had gone east and it was not until her return a few years ago that she learned that the Wilsons had actually struck it rich.

Being unable to get from them what she claimed was her half of the money, brought suit in 1910, but the necessary witnesses were scattered in all corners of the world and consequently the suit lay dormant until now. Yesterday was the day set for the trial, but the defendants asked for a continuance, alleging that Mrs.
Wilson was ill. Herrington strongly opposed the motion and Judge Trout refused to continue the case any longer than until Monday, when it will go on trial.

SHEPHERDERS WANTED.

George W. Bawer, superintendent of the Williams sheep interests in Elko, Lander and Churchill counties, was in town yesterday trying to secure forty shepherders. He was unsuccessful, as all the available herders here have been engaged by sheepmen in this section.—Winne-muca Star.
